

They began to share
a piece of their bread
with sick and hungry prisoners.
You don't have to be rich to help others.

They began to share
a piece of their bread
with sick and hungry prisoners.
You don't have to be rich to help others.

The Man Who Shared His Jumper

A true story of Richard Wurmbrand, of Rumania.

By Jill Kemp

Illustrated by Richard Gunther

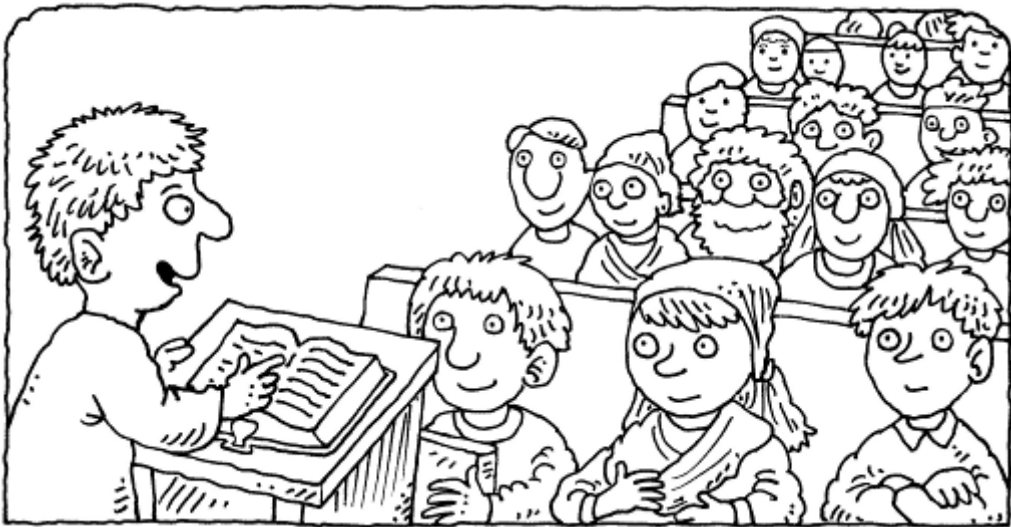

The Man Who Shared His Jumper

A true story of Richard Wurmbrand, of Rumania.

By Jill Kemp

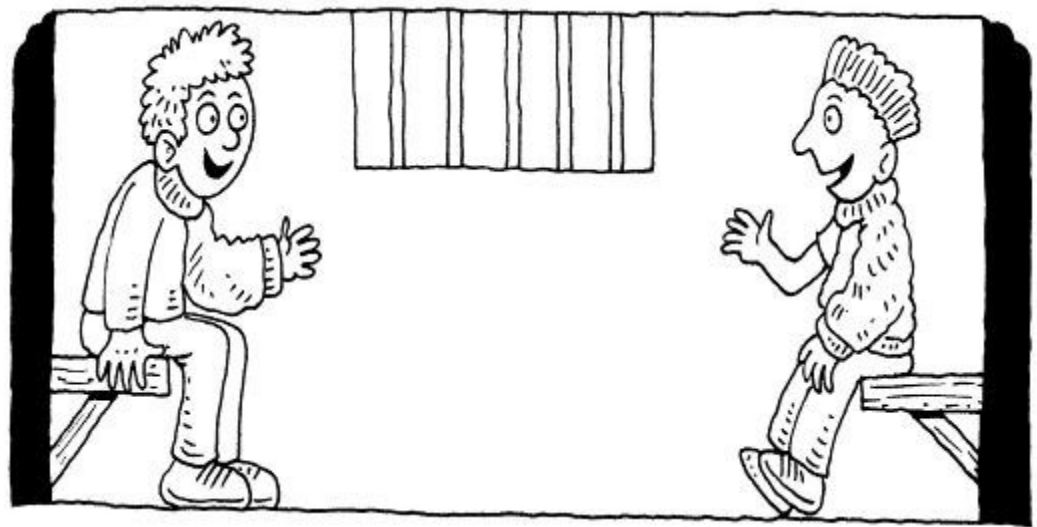

Illustrated by Richard Gunther

A long time ago, in a far away country,
there was a good Pastor
who told the people in his church
how much God loved them.

2

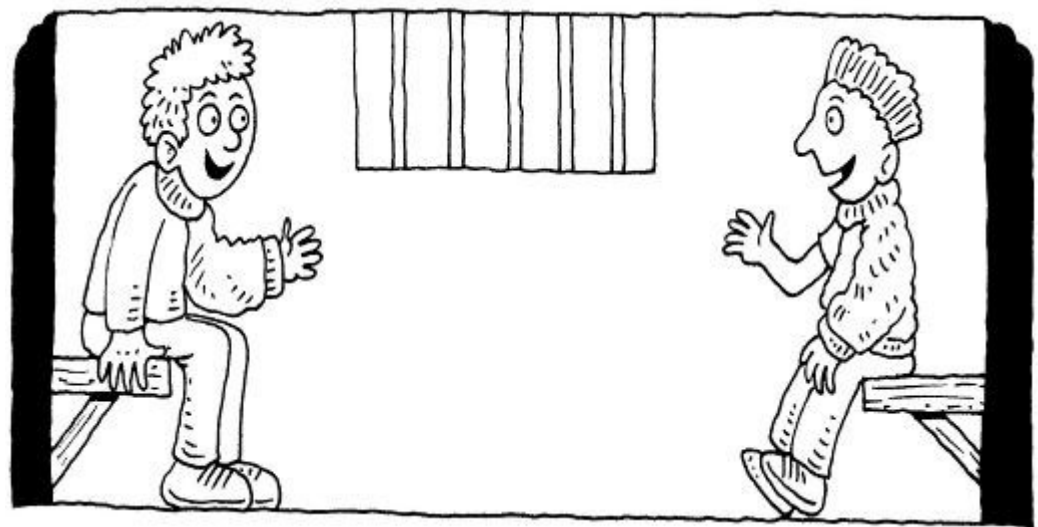

Soon the other man
believed in Jesus too.
“Let us show other prisoners
how much God loves them,” he said.

7

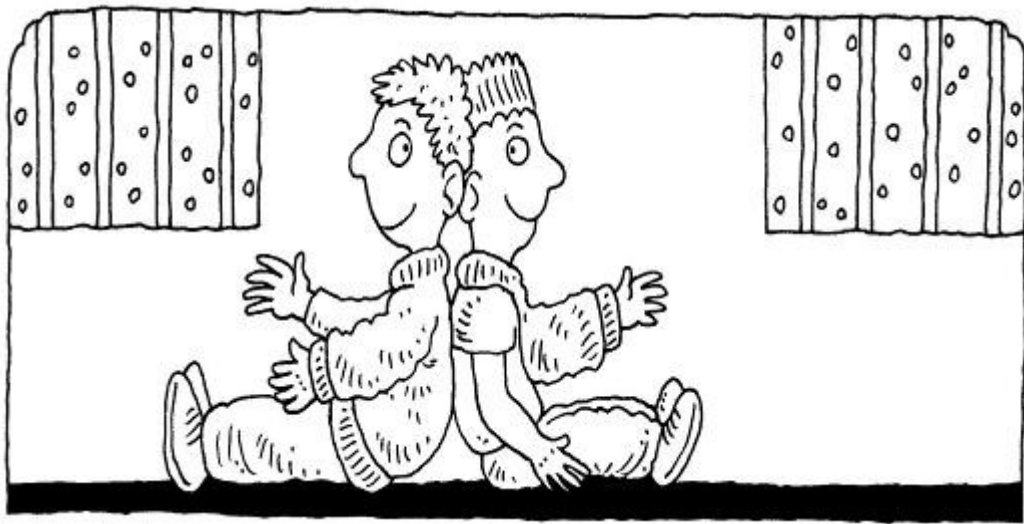

A long time ago, in a far away country,
there was a good Pastor
who told the people in his church
how much God loved them.

2

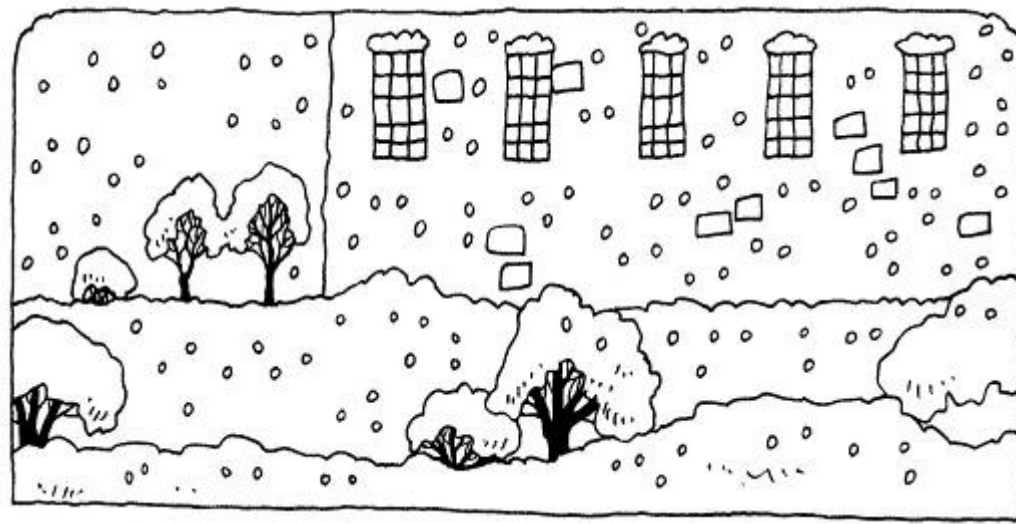

Soon the other man
believed in Jesus too.
“Let us show other prisoners
how much God loves them,” he said.

7

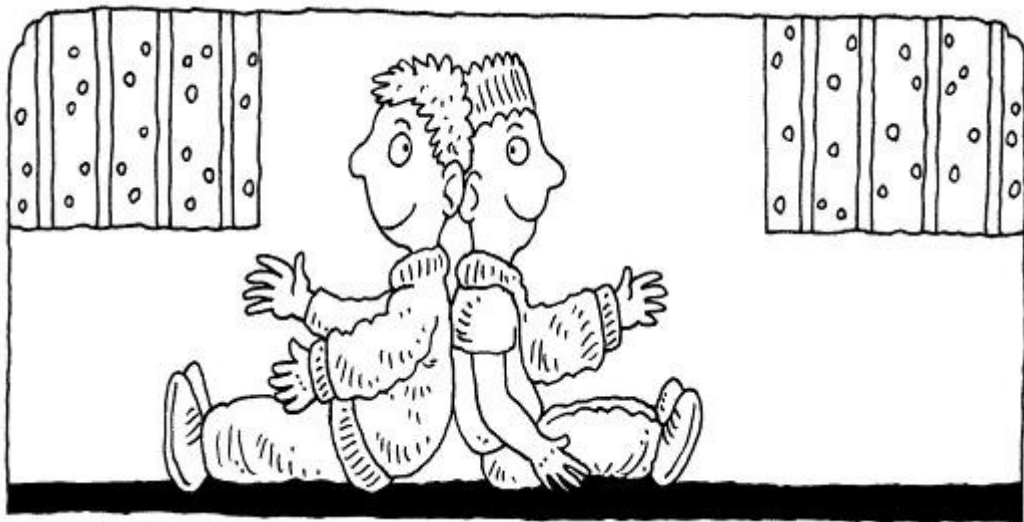

They sat back to back,
warming each other.
The Pastor told him about Jesus
and how much God loves us.

6

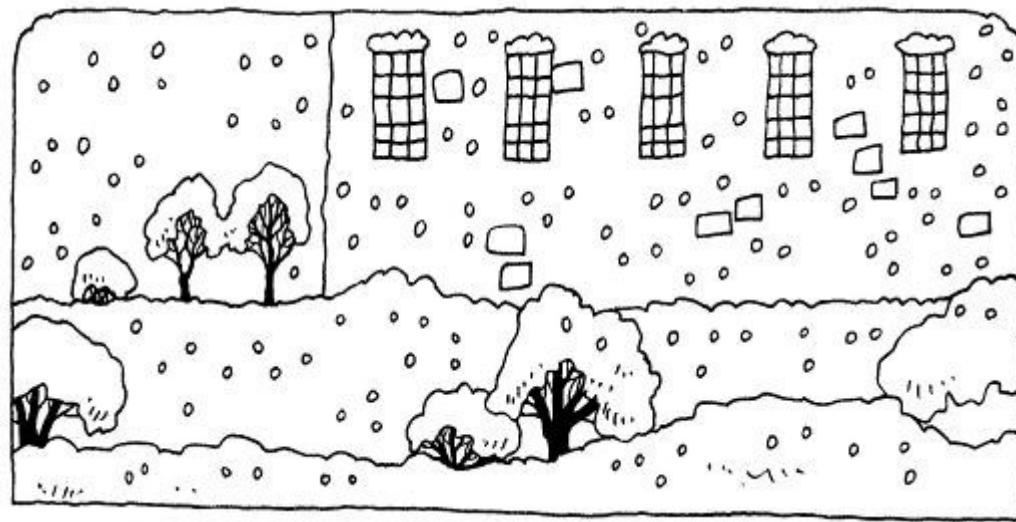

But the government made a new rule.
Anyone telling people about God would go to jail.
It was snowing the day the good Pastor
was sent to prison.

3

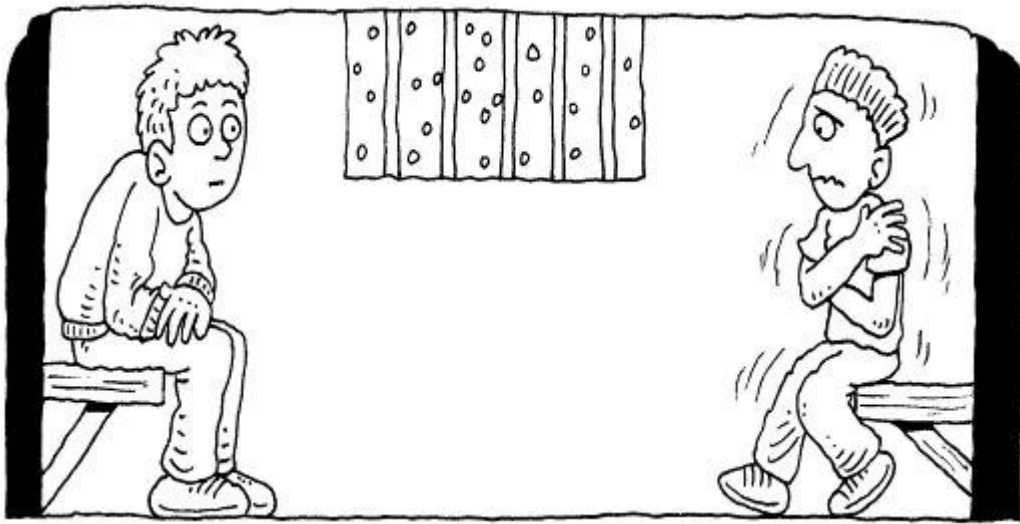

They sat back to back,
warming each other.
The Pastor told him about Jesus
and how much God loves us.

6

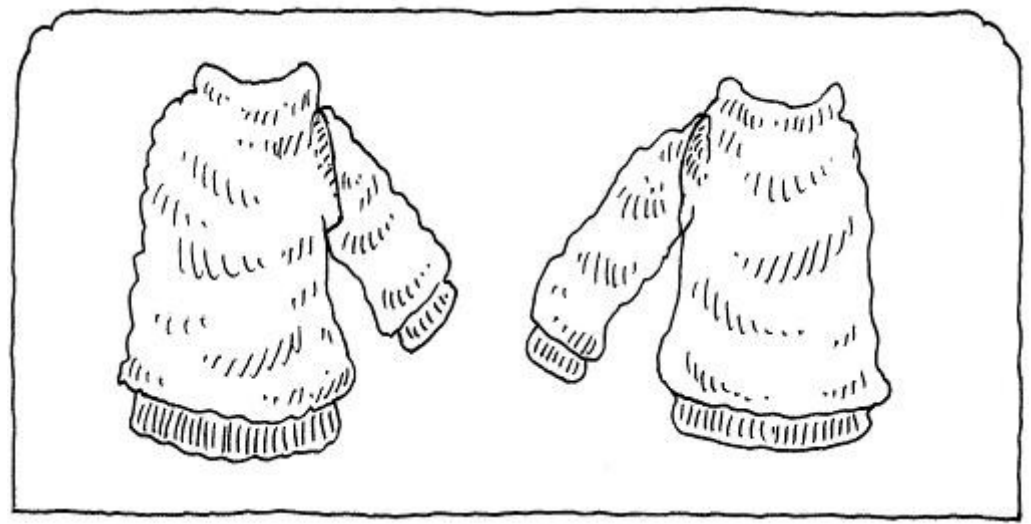

But the government made a new rule.
Anyone telling people about God would go to jail.
It was snowing the day the good Pastor
was sent to prison.

3

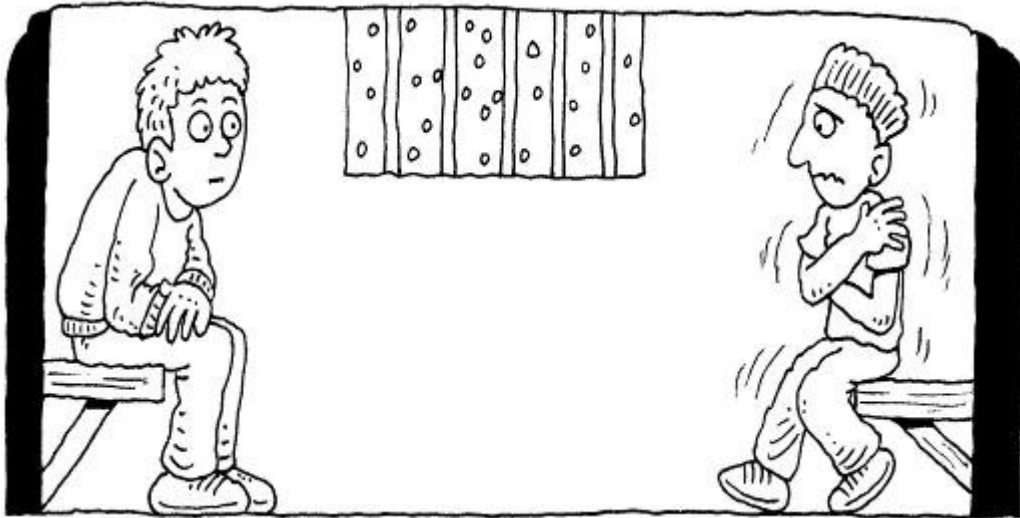

He thanked God that he was wearing his jumper.
The other prisoner in his cell
was cold and hungry.
“We will freeze or starve to death here,” he said.

4

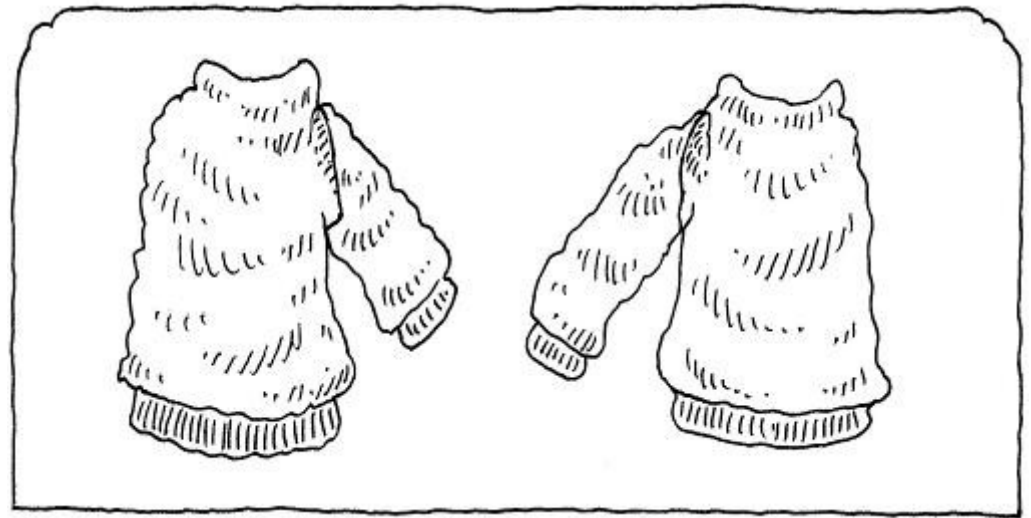

“How can God be with you
in this awful place?” he asked.
The Pastor carefully unpicked his jumper.
He gave half of his jumper to the other man.

5

He thanked God that he was wearing his jumper.
The other prisoner in his cell
was cold and hungry.
“We will freeze or starve to death here,” he said.

4

“How can God be with you
in this awful place?” he asked.
The Pastor carefully unpicked his jumper.
He gave half of his jumper to the other man.

5